

Raising the Standards

Some people resign their thoughts To lesser dreams, Others quit the tasks before them, Or resolve to achieve a level For their projects and themselves Which are merely suitable.

Let us break through The limits of our constructs And our self-created boundaries And achieve a standard by which Othese may serve Others may say: "You have set new horizons!"

Through his father Richard, the traditional blacksmith craft was passed on to Boris; at home, art and metal were part of a daily life. After completing a degree in Fine Arts at McMaster University in 1995, Boris committed his artistic future to metal and joined his father at the forge.

Hartley T. Richardson

Hartley Richardson is the 7th family President of James Richardson & Sons, Limited. It is within his 19 years of leadership to date that the Firm has experienced its most significant growth in value.

Hartley attended the University of Manitoba,

graduating with a Bachelor of Commerce (Honours) in 1977. His other designations include Honorary Doctor of Laws (LLD) degrees from the University of Manitoba and University of Winnipeg, the Order of Manitoba and, in February of 2007, he was appointed to the Order of Canada, our nation's highest civilian honour.

Prior to formally joining the Firm in 1978, Hartley began his practical education with a series of summer appointments within the grain division. He learned the fundamentals of the family business working at the Pioneer elevator in Carey, Manitoba, the Sorel and Thunder Bay port terminals, Topnotch Feeds, Green Valley Fertilizer, and Buckerfield's. He went on to hold positions of progressive responsibility in the Firm's grain and real estate operations.

According to Hartley, "There were always discussions around the dinner table so we learned inherently about the ins and outs of running a business. It was part of our growing up. Over the years, I certainly grew more appreciative of my predecessors and all they had accomplished during their respective tenures. I recall my father saying, when you are born into this family, you have grain dust in your blood."

Today, as President & Chief Executive Officer, Hartley Richardson has representation in an Executive or Board capacity on all of the Firm's companies. A strategic thinker, he championed the grain business' expansion into value-added food processing and its investment in the development of functional foods and nutraceuticals. In addition, Hartley advocated for the expansion of the oil and gas exploration division, making way for an unprecedented discovery in southwestern Manitoba and successful investments in the oil sands of northern Alberta. He also orchestrated the Firm's return to financial services in 2003 with the formation of two new companies. Building on a tradition of service, Hartley lends his time and experience as a Director of Canadian Pacific Railway and served for seven years as a Director of the Royal Bank of Canada. He is Chairman of the Canadian Council of Chief Executives and past Chairman of the Business Council of Manitoba. In addition, he is Chairman of the Assiniboine Park Conservancy, Co-Chair of the Trans Canada Trail Foundation, and Chair of the Board of Governors of The Duke of Edinburgh's Award Charter for Business.

The current presidency is highly regarded for the way it has positioned James Richardson & Sons, Limited as a global leader powering the new economy with a strong group of diversified core businesses and investments, assuring their future through sound planning and sustainable growth.

Carolyn A. Hursh

A Director of the Firm since 1991, Carolyn (Richardson) Hursh was appointed Chairman of the Board in 2000, following in the footsteps of her father, the Honourable James Richardson, and her uncle, George T. Richardson. As the cutive Chairman, she guides the business of the Firm's first non-executive Chairman, she guides the business of the Board and provides leadership for the Firm and the family.

After generations of having a family-based Board, Carolyn and Hartley formalized a new governance structure for JRSL, which for the first time included independent Directors, as well as audit, nominating, and compensation committees. "Our independent Directors challenge our thinking and suggest alternate strategies," says Carolyn. "We benefit from their outside perspective as well as their years of experience and business acumen."

Continuing a family tradition of community service, Carolyn currently serves as Chairman of the Max Bell Foundation, a position previously held by her father. She is also a Director of Corus Entertainment, Inc. and sits on two community Advisory Boards.

Carolyn has also made it a priority to be a visible family representative of the Firm. Along with Hartley, she co-hosts corporate functions, such as the annual 25 Years' Service Awards Dinner and the JR Christmas Party, and represents the company at client appreciation events and new facility openings.

"As Chairman of a family business, it is my responsibility to keep the family connected to each other and to the business," she says. Carolyn ensures that company information is well communicated to the shareholders and every quarter; she chairs a shareholder business meeting and a private family meeting. She and Hartley also organize a biennial family conference, which brings together members of the fourth, fifth, and sixth generations for business education and team building. "Each time we teach the next generation something about the business - including that ownership of a company is a responsibility as well as a privilege," Carolyn says. There are 29 members of the sixth generation, known as G6s, between the ages of 4 and 33. "During the conference, we also have a lot of fun and adventure - each time the G6s are building their repertoire of shared experiences. In the future, as shareholders, employees, or Directors of the company, these positive relationships will help them stay together and work through trying times."

Carolyn says it is immensely satisfying to be involved in setting the stage for the future of both the Firm and the family:

"To have a strong family business, you need to have both a strong business and a strong family. In terms of business strategy, we have well-diversified companies that are successful in their traditional core businesses at the same time as they explore new, innovative niches. From the family perspective, we are developing educated, thoughtful young men and women in the next generation who we hope will one day be ready to assume responsibility as owners and managers to lead James Richardson & Sons, Limited into the future."
